

GEN'L MARTIN OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN FOR G. O. P. NOMINATION

Addresses Leaders From 12 Northwestern Counties Meeting at Oil City
 DISCUSSES THE ISSUES
 Candidate Has Had A Distinguished Career in Public Service

(Special to Courier)
 OIL CITY, Apr. 9.—The campaign of Major General Edward Martin for the Republican gubernatorial nomination opened here last night.
 In times of war, Martin told Republican leaders from 12 northwestern counties, "civilian experience cannot prepare a man to deal with all of those problems of defense, of transportation, feeding, shelter and maintaining law and order."
 General Martin's address in full follows:
 I am offering myself as a candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania. You have a right first of all to know what manner of man I am.
 Until January 27th, of this year, I was commanding General of the 28th Infantry Division. On that date, because of Army Regulations under which I was declared over-age for my rank for duty with combat troops, or for training combat units, I relinquished my command. I then became Commanding General, Zone of the Interior, Fifth Corps Area, a non-combatant post from which I was relieved upon the approval of the Secretary of War.
 My greatest personal desire would be to serve with combat troops as I did in World War I in France and in the Spanish-American War in the Philippines. That I cannot do under our Army Regulations, I do not question the wisdom of these orders.
 I am a soldier and have always been a soldier. A soldier's creed is a creed of service. I am in full vigor and anxious to be of genuine service to my State and my Country. I am convinced and thousands of my friends are convinced that by training and experience I am fully qualified for the vitally important job of War Governor of Pennsylvania.
 I have served this Commonwealth in both civil and military capacities for more than forty years of my life. I enlisted as a private in the Spanish-American war and saw service in the Philippines. I was with Pershing on the Mexican border in 1916. I went overseas with the 28th Division and fought in five major campaigns. In 1929 I was made Adjutant General of this State. When the Guard was called into Federal service I became Commanding General of my old division and trained it for combat duty.
 I have been a civilian servant of this State. From 1925 to 1929 I served it as Auditor General and from 1929 to 1933 as State Treasurer. I may or may not have served with distinction but I did serve with efficiency and honesty. My record as a soldier, as an official, as a citizen and a man is an open book.
 Like millions of my fellow-Americans I was a depression casualty. All I had acquired was swept away leaving me heavily in debt. Through ten years of hard work and frugal living, I have been paying off that indebtedness as best I could. I made a settlement with my creditors in which I gave up everything I had. This settlement was approved by the Court of Common Pleas after a public hearing. I am no political neutral. I believe now as always in two party government. I believe in a Republican Pennsylvania.

LATEST NEWS BULLETINS

British Critical of Naval Strategy
 London.—In the face of mounting press criticism over Great Britain's naval strategy, the British Admiralty today announced that the aircraft carrier Hermes has been sunk by Japanese torpedo planes in the wake of the loss of the cruisers Dorsetshire and Cornwall.
 The Hermes, an old-timer, was the first vessel ever designed and built by the Admiralty as an aircraft carrier. She was launched in 1919.
 News that the Hermes had followed three other British aircraft carriers—the Courageous, the Ark Royal and the Glorious—beneath the waves, came as a shock to Britain.
 Another Admiralty announcement that British submarines had accounted for four more Axis ships in the Mediterranean did nothing to lessen the feeling of chagrin.
 The Admiralty announcement on the sinking of the Hermes, which carried a normal complement of 664 officers and men, said it was believed all personnel were saved when the carrier went down only 10 miles off Ceylon.
 Our Flag Still Flies On Corregidor
 Washington.—Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright informed the War Department today that "our flag still flies" on powerful Corregidor, but added that although the island fortress is being constantly bombed by the Japs, he has ordered that no fire be returned for fear of hitting the 36,853 American-Filipino troops trapped on Bataan.
 Stressing the fact that all communications between Corregidor and Bataan had been cut off for nearly 24 hours, Wainwright said "it is apparent that fighting on the Peninsula has ceased," indicating that the trapped defenders have been either killed or captured.
 Resumption of aerial bombardment of Corregidor by the Japs after a five-day lull left no doubt that the Nipponese expect to continue in an effort to crush the last islands of resistance in the Manila area.
 Meanwhile Wainwright's torpedo boats sank a Japanese cruiser near the central Philippine Island of Sebu on which invading forces were reported to be landing for the first time.
 Mention of the fact that Japanese artillery were shelling Corregidor from Bataan left little doubt that the Japs now control the lower end of the peninsula, which the U. S. troops had held three months.
 New Doubts Arise Over India
 New Delhi.—New doubts arose today over prospects for success of negotiations for settlement of the long standing Indian problem when it was disclosed that many members of the all India Congress Party feel some of the new proposals in the British plan for post-war independence are unsatisfactory. A final decision by the party's working committee was expected soon.
 Three Clergymen Arrested
 Stockholm.—Bishop Berggrav of Oslo and three other Norwegian clergymen were arrested today as an aftermath of the church rebellion against the Quisling regime in Norway, according to reports received in Stockholm.
 The four men were lodged in a concentration camp near Oslo. They were the first churchmen arrested by Quisling. Bishop Berggrav was known as a symbol of the church's resistance to the puppet premier and German domination.
 Air Offensive Against Japan Begins
 Melbourne.—The United Nations air offensive against Japan already has begun and "will continue to increase," Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, American commander of all air forces in Australia declared today.
 Lieut. Gen. Brett's announcement was coupled with a disclosure by Australian Air Minister Drakeford that United Nations fliers had destroyed or damaged at least 126 enemy planes during the month ended April 8.
 A Royal Australian Air Force Bulletin revealed that eight Jap bombers and one fighter plane were probably destroyed in a heavy raid, led by American pilots yesterday, against enemy bases at Rabaul, New Britain.
 "Limitation of equipment" is the only hindrance at the moment to a fuller offensive against the Japanese, Lieut. Gen. Brett said.
 SALVATION ARMY DRIVE SHORT OF GOAL
 Only 36% of Quota Has Been Collected in Bucks County
 REQUEST MORE AID
 NEWTOWN, Apr. 10.—Bucks County has collected 36 per cent of its quota for the Salvation Army's Greater Philadelphia Maintenance Fund Drive. The announcement was made by Wallace G. Murfit, of Newtown, chairman of the Bucks County Division of the campaign at the Salvation Army drive's third report luncheon held Monday at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.
 In asking Bucks County campaign workers to begin a more intensive solicitation Mr. Murfit stated:
 "This year's drive will go over the top, and Bucks County will do its share and more to bring the drive to a successful conclusion. But, to do so means that all workers engaged in raising this fund must continue to carry the message of the wonderful work the Salvation Army is doing and spread that message to the public at large."
 The report luncheon which marked the half-way turn in the Salvation Army drive, found the campaign running well ahead of schedule. Richard Hay Woolsey, general chairman of the drive, announced that the fund had reached a total of $135,421.86, or 60.1 per cent of the goal of $225,000. Last year the Salvation Army received $52.50 from the Autocar Company.
 Drive executives and workers were spurred on by a gift of $4358 presented by Colonel Robert C. Brady on behalf of employees, both military and civilian, at the Quartermasters Depot, 20th and Johnson streets. The contribution represents an advance of more than 400 per cent over the Quartermaster's Depot's gift of $1003 last year.
 This week the Salvation Army began

 One Man's Opinion
 By WALTER KIERMAN (I. N. S. Staff Writer)
 So we've lost Bataan which we never expected to hold anyway.
 So what?
 So some of the customers are saying "MacArthur wouldn't have lost it!"
 Which is silly. Which is stupid. Which is as unfair to MacArthur as it is to Wainwright.
 Sure we lost Bataan. This isn't a beer and skittles war and we will lose more.
 But when the bell sounds for the last round you know who will be in there answering it?
 Us.
 Then we'll get Bataan again and Luzon and everything else we've lost.
 Because a war isn't over until the last battle and we've got our stamp on that one.
 Thought for the day: We'll be back.
 HULMEVILLE
 The following guests were entertained on Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Foster: Mr. and Mrs. Robert White, Penns Manor; Mrs. John Worral, Frankford; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clucas, Camden, N. J.; and Amos Carver, of Langhorne.
 Recent visitors of Mrs. Harry P. Gill were Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Valentine, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Miss Helen E. Gill, Philadelphia.

APPEAL TO WOMEN TO BUILD FOOD BANKS DURING SUMMER

Food Conservation Committee of Bucks County Solicits Co-operation of All
 MUST BE PREPARED
 May Be Needed To Meet An Early Emergency
 A special appeal is being made by the Food Conservation Committee of the Bucks County Council of Defense to the women of the County for assistance in building the Food Banks during the Spring and Summer months.
 Mrs. Thomas Ross, Doylestown, chairman of the Committee, made the following statement this morning regarding the needs of her Committee:
 "To meet a possible early emergency, and to prepare for future emergencies and disasters, the Food Conservation Committee of the Bucks County Council of Defense is making an earnest appeal to every woman in the County.
 "Will you give one full and one empty jar to provide an immediate food bank for sudden need and receptacles for the summer canning project under the direction of local food conservation committees, and will you volunteer to help in the canning center nearest to you, or if that is impossible, to do some canning at home when you are providing for your own family.
 "The food banks are for the needs of the work of the County Defense Council, its hospital units, the Red Cross Disaster Committees, and later, if need be, for hospitals and destitute families in all parts of our own county.
 "Every woman who wishes to render this service to our home defense work should notify the nearest chairman by

 They Can Take It
 Washington, April 9.
 IT has been said a great many times that the American people have not yet fully grasped the realities of this war. Undoubtedly that is true. And certainly the cheap ballyhoo which emanates from the propaganda bureaus in Washington is not calculated to promote their understanding—rather the reverse.
 INSTEAD of the weekly "pep talks" written for Mr. Donald Nelson by his publicity experts, better results could be had from the calm presentation of a few cold facts. Instead of being fed on soggy slogans invented by feverish Administration press agents, more nourishment would be afforded the national morale if some of the things the enemy knows about us could be clearly set before our own people.
 FOR example, it is assuredly no secret that after four months of war we are engaged only with the Japanese and are altogether on the defensive. Here and there we make a sortie and achieve a success in ships sunk or planes brought down. But essentially ours is a defensive fight and will remain so for a long time to come. And our allies—the British, the Chinese, the Dutch, the Indians—are on the defensive, too. On our side, only the Russians have taken the offensive in the last six months and now that spring has come the whole anti-Axis world is afflicted with apprehension that the Russian offensive cannot be maintained.
 THESE are facts of which the Germans and Japanese are well aware. Every thoughtful man in this country who follows the news is, of course, aware of them, too. But the great bulk of the American people

 SERVICE CLUBS HEAR DEFENSE BONDS TALKS
 War Financing is Outlined To Both Rotary and Exchange Clubs
 LESTER THORNE SPEAKS
 Lester D. Thorne, secretary and treasurer of the Bristol Trust Company, and also representative of the Bucks County Council for the sale of War Savings Bonds and Stamps, was the speaker at both the Rotary and Exchange clubs meetings held at the Elks' Home yesterday.
 At the Exchange Club meeting, held last evening, Mr. Thorne was introduced by Paul Forster, Esq., also a member of the Council. Mr. Thorne explained the purpose of the drive which will be made on April 16th by the Bucks County Council for Defense, in a door to door canvas to encourage citizens to make pledges for purchase of bonds and stamps. The drive is to be carried out by the Air Raid Wardens of the county. Pledges will be voluntary and the drive will not be a sales campaign.
 Mr. Thorne answered many questions as to the types of bonds, interest rates, and methods of purchase.
 Preceding Mr. Thorne's talk at the Exchange Club meeting last evening a business meeting was held by the club. President Russell W. DeLong was in charge.
 Another feature of the Rotary meeting held yesterday afternoon was the election of officers. George Ardrey was elected president to succeed John Hargrave. Rev. James R. Galley and Emil Metzger were re-elected to the posts of secretary and treasurer respectively. John O. Slemmer was named first vice-president and James Maddox was elected second vice-president. The new sergeant-at-arms is Edward Lynn and the first and second assistants are Jacob C. Schmidt, Sr., and Harry Watson. Members of the Board of Governors include William J. Begley, Esq., and Gordon H. Fromm. All officers will take office July 1st, 1942.
 Following Mr. Thorne's talk to the Rotary Club, of which he is a member, another speaker, Bruce Mathewson, representative of the Progressive Composition Co., Phila., was introduced to the members. He talked on his hobby of flying. "Flying trains a man to train himself in the right direction," Mathewson declared. He told members of the operations of a plane and gave a detailed description of flight maneuvering.
 A group composed of merchants and the two banking institutions have subscribed to an advertising campaign to acquaint the public with the advantages of War Savings Stamps and Bonds.

PAYS FINE AND APOLOGIZES FOR BLACKOUT VIOLATION

Dr. Nicholas F. Vincent, East Orange, N. J., Admits He Did Wrong on Jan. 18
 PAYS A FINE OF $20
 Writes Letter Explaining His Action and Gives Apology
 DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 10.—The books were closed today on a case that attracted state-wide attention three months ago when a New Jersey physician, during the county-wide blackout on January 18th, drove his car along the Old York Road from Hatboro to New Hope, disregarding warnings and orders to stop given by the Emergency Police and the Defense Council officials. The completion of the case came with the announcement by the District Attorney of Bucks County, Edward G. Biester, that Dr. Nicholas F. Vincent, East Orange, N. J., the driver of the car, had acknowledged that he was in the wrong and had made an apology for his behavior. Dr. Vincent's statement was given in a written plea for the withdrawal of three charges of assault that had been lodged against him.
 According to the stories published at the time, Dr. Vincent, driving on Route 202 toward New Hope, refused to stop his car when the blackout signals were sounded and he was requested to move to the side of the road and extinguish his lights. In apparent disregard of orders to halt, given him by the Emergency Police, Dr. Vincent did not do so until he was halted by the State Motor Police at the Delaware River Bridge. There he claimed to be a doctor in a hurry to reach his office in East Orange and upon showing his driver's license proving his profession.

 Not Enough Done To Get Health Census of People
 "True strength of the community, state and nation, in war-time as well as peace-times, is in the quality of the manpower and the capacity to produce."
 This statement was made today by Mrs. Emma P. Stover, in referring to the importance of the Early Diagnosis Campaign being conducted by the Bucks County Tuberculosis Society.
 "In a war period it is important to learn the quality of our manpower and then to set about improving it as a major requisite for national protection," continued Mrs. Stover. "Far too little has been done to obtain a health census of the people.
 "Such an appraisal has long been an objective of the Public Health Service and the earnest wish of those engaged especially in the prevention of tuberculosis. But the dream has seemed fantastic because of its proportions. Now that we have examples of what can be done among certain groups and have the stimulus of a national emergency, the time has come to strike out along this trail and to learn by appraising its needs the way to recondition a nation.
 "Conditioning a whole people is a mighty task. A tremendous emergency demands that it be undertaken.
 "Among the graver perils to health are tuberculosis, venereal disease and heart disease. Through co-operation with your tuberculosis and health association in the 15th annual Early Diagnosis Campaign we can arouse interest in the prevention of these diseases, uphold the professional groups engaged in combating them and, thereby, do our bit in promoting the total defense of our country."
 50 Gather at Affair When Frances Tortu is Feted
 Miss Frances Tortu, Wilson street, was tendered a surprise lingerie shower Tuesday evening at a club headquarters on Lafayette street. The party was given by her attendants-to-be, Miss Frances DeGregorio, Mansion street and Miss Sara DiQuattr, Philadelphia. The room was decorated in blue and egg-shell tones, and gifts were attached to streamers.
 The evening was enjoyed in a social way and a delicious repast served. About 50 attended from Bristol, Philadelphia, Trenton and Beverly, N. J.

NOTE OF OPTIMISM

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, who formerly expressed the opinion that this would be a long war, took occasion on his 80th birthday anniversary to sound a note of optimism.

Doctor Butler, in addition to being well informed on national and international matters through the usual channel of news and opinion, conducts an extensive correspondence which includes numerous letters from underground sources in Europe.

"I have heard so many reports of unrest, and especially of unrest among German women, that a sudden collapse of Germany from economic causes would not surprise me," he said.

It is to be hoped that he is right, and that a sudden collapse of Hitler will occur. It is a pleasant thought. But the Allies are not depending upon that eventuality to win the war. To make certain of German collapse American industry must extend its war production to the utmost.

When the Allies are in a position to send fleets of 300 or 400 bombers over Germany every night, week upon week, here will be more reason to hope for German collapse. When they see the havoc and misery they have inflicted upon the world being returned to them, the Germans will be eager to quit. It was this prospect which caused them to yell "kammerad" in 1918 before their armies had been pushed back across the German border.

Had the Allies wrecked Germany then, as the Germans had wrecked Belgium, France and other lands, it would not be necessary to do the job now.

HONEY'S DAY

Honey has acquired a greater importance in the home now that sugar is on the rationing list, especially to the housewife who does much of her own baking. Tests have proved that, if used correctly, it serves as an excellent substitute for sugar. Many persons even prefer it to sugar in coffee and in some foods. There are other substitutes, but honey is well known and easily obtained.

The housewife, as well as the commercial baker, may find that the substitution of honey for sugar will require some experimenting. Honey is about one-fifth water, which fact must be allowed for in measuring ingredients. Baking with honey requires a slightly lower temperature than with sugar. American ingenuity will not be outwitted by such small matters, however, and no doubt the housewife will find a way to use more honey if the sugar shortage warrants it.

As a result of the increased importance of honey, beekeepers are preparing for a busy year. They have been assured of enough sugar to keep their bees healthy, since it is necessary to feed the bees sweetened water to keep them from starving after the honey has been removed from the hive. It is a co-operative affair—the housewife cannot have an unlimited supply of sugar; the beekeeper gets some, feeds it to his bees, then sells the honey to the housewife who uses it for sugar.

To a lesser degree than honey, maple sugar, too, will be used as a substitute for sugar. The 1942 "boiling," which has now been completed, is bringing about fifty cents a gallon more than last year's price.

Crime at Castaway by EDITH BRISTOL

SYNOPSIS

Desperately in need of work, Gerry Lane becomes secretary to Walter Gregg, wealthy owner of Castaway Ranch, despite the warning of her predecessor that the people there are queer. At Castaway, she meets Estelle Gregg, the contractor's wife, a sophisticated, bleach-blond; Sydney Loftus, Estelle's cynical son; Martha, Gregg's middle-aged sister, who manages the household and breeds race horses; and Harry Craven, Gregg's business manager, a dapper, moustached individual with piercing black eyes; and Lance Gregg, the contractor's bronzed, sturdy nephew. Gerry senses the tension among all these people and a feeling of foreboding envelops her. Meeting Walter Gregg, the next morning, she likes him instantly. He cautions her that his files are confidential and must be locked and the key given to his personal servant, Kobe. Leaving his study for the day, Gregg asks Gerry to finish the Durfee file first. She learns from it that Worth Durfee had lost a court case to Gregg over a boundary. Later, Durfee had "accidentally" sent Gregg's car hurtling over a cliff, seriously injuring the contractor. The latter won a $50,000 damage suit. The case is under appeal and Durfee is trying to have Gregg accept a compromise cash settlement. A strange woman slips in through the window of the study. She says she has a message for Mr. Gregg from Miss Dawson at Hidden Cove. Gerry goes to summon Martha and when she returns, the woman and a picture of Gregg, which hung over the fireplace, have disappeared. Martha discounts the incident, adding that she has a duplicate photo and no one need know anything about the theft. She says the mysterious woman is Florabelle Hunt, maid for Pauline Dawson, Gregg's divorced wife, who arrived the day before at the nearby Hidden Cove cottage, much to the chagrin of the entire Castaway household. The eccentric Pauline had squandered a substantial settlement and Gregg still supports her. Craven, Gerry and Martha are at dinner that night, Estelle and Sydney have gone to San Francisco. Gerry divines that Martha distrusts the suave Craven.

CHAPTER SIX

The evening had turned cooler and the snap and sparkle of the open fire in the living room was welcome after dinner. Domino, the spotted coach dog, stretched luxuriously before the hearth, and the spaniels only left its warmth to trot at the heels of their mistress when she left the room.

Then Craven looked at me sharply and moved beside me on the davenport and I remembered what Miss Baldwin had said—"one of them bores holes in you with his eyes." But he could be winning and ingratiating when he wanted to and right now he wanted to.

"I'm glad to hear you like your work at Castaway," he began.

"I only hope Mr. Gregg will like my work as well as I like the place," I smiled back.

"I'm sure he will. The instant I saw you last night I knew you were the secretary for him. He needs somebody to protect him from annoyance. That's what I try to do in the business. Miss Gregg does it here at the ranch. He's had enough shock in that accident to kill any ordinary man. I try to take over the business worries without his knowing he's being protected. That's why I was so sorry to have him send to the Gallina office for records. I don't think he's strong enough, yet, to stand the grind of the business."

"The business seems to spread over considerable territory," I suggested. "I'm not quite clear, yet, where all the places are that are mentioned in the papers I've been filing."

"Don't wonder you're a bit confused," Craven smiled as he lit a cigarette. "Since the boss was hurt and I've been driving down here almost every day, I can hardly tell where we do business myself. We have offices in San Francisco—you'll have noticed that in your filing—but the big plant is in Gallina, twenty miles inland from here. The gravel beds and the quarry are over the hills to the south, on the Castaway property. The biggest job we've ever done is the Gallina Dam—it is about seventy miles in the mountains and we still keep a camp there. I'm in charge of all the cement mixing.

"It sounds like a tremendous piece of work," I volunteered.

"It's a whale of a job! I'll take you over to see it one of these days. It is one of our typical California water projects where they take a whole valley, block off one end with concrete, and make a lake out of it to store water for irrigation and electric power."

"I'm sure I shall learn a great deal from working for Mr. Gregg," I said.

"You're dead right! It's because I can tell the kind of girl you are and how much your work will help any man, that I'm going to ask you now to help me to help him. We both want to make things easier for him."

It was a good approach, a plausible lead for what was to follow. But before Craven could come to the point—and I felt that everything else he had said was merely a prelude to that point—Martha Gregg came back into the room. Conversation again became general until the evening waned and it was time for me to leave the fire-hot room for my own bungalow.

Craven walked with me to the door, held it open, stepped beside me across the open square of the patio where the rain-laden wind blew strong in our faces, and started up the slope of the garden.

"I'll see you safely to your cottage," he offered.

"It's only a step and I'm not at all afraid," I protested.

"I didn't have the chance to finish what I started to say," his voice was confidential and persuasive. "I'm sure you understand my only wish is to save Mr. Gregg from business worries. I know how it is. I started in at the bottom and came up the hard way, just as he did."

Not with those soft, manured hands, I thought, but said nothing. We reached the covered steps of the little bungalow and I waited for him to continue. The eucalyptus branches were over our heads and the wind whipped my hair into elf-locks around my face. The sound of the surf on the shore came through the damp darkness. Craven chose his words with care.

"I need to keep in touch with every detail of the business, but it's hard to follow everything that is going on. Therefore, I have thought of a way that will help me to take more problems off the boss's shoulders. And you can help me."

"You want to make things easier for Mr. Gregg, don't you?" Craven's tones were all silky solicitude.

"Certainly."

"Now, look—you're a reasonable girl. You can look at all sides of a question."

"Mr. Craven," I looked straight into his eyes—as nearly straight as I could, for he shifted his gaze—the flare of his cigarette lighter showed me that much; "what are you asking me to do?"

"In ordinary circumstances what I'm asking would sound out of order—but these aren't ordinary circumstances. Here's a sick man trying to handle details of a business away from his plant. Here I am—trying to be two places at once. You can see for yourself that if I'm going to keep things going I've got to know everything that goes on here."

My reddened temper was rising. "I'll listen, if you'll tell me what it is that you want. If not, I'll go in—it's starting to rain."

"Here's what I want—and I'm prepared to pay you well for it. Any pretty girl like you can use an extra hundred or so—I want you to make a carbon copy for me of everything you write for Mr. Gregg."

I was furious! But on the instant I couldn't find the right words to answer. His suggestion was so monstrous that no answer came.

Perhaps my silence seemed to give consent, for Craven went on: "You can manage it easily enough. It's copies of the letters he writes that I need most. Just to keep me informed of what he's doing. It's a bargain, then?"

I was thinking fast. I couldn't afford to make a break with this young man, no matter how outrageous his suggestion was to sell out my employer. To take Mr. Gregg's money and to turn over his affairs to one who gave such plausible, convincing reasons for wanting to know the details of the business. I needed this job so desperately I couldn't afford the luxury of speaking my mind. I tried to control my temper and to answer as quietly as I could:

"I don't question your motives, Mr. Craven. And it's not my place to speak of your methods. But when Mr. Gregg gives me orders to deliver a copy to you of everything I do for him, I'll be glad to do it."

That, I flattered myself, was a triumph of moderate statement. I hoped that I had made it sound completely final. But Craven was not so easily discouraged.

"Think it over, my dear girl. It's worthwhile. And whether you make up your mind to accept the proposition or not—if you expect to get along well on this job—I'm trusting to your discretion not to mention this little conversation."

And that, as I noted in a few scrawls in the little blue diary, had all the earmarks of a threat, if ever I heard one. I was so angry I couldn't get to sleep. This was one thing Miss Baldwin hadn't warned me against—this outbreak of bribery at Castaway!

What kind of place was this—where a secretary was expected to be a spy? The storm outside grew violent and I tossed and turned in futile vexation.

The morning fulfilled the promise of the restless night.

I liked working for Walter Gregg. His quick decisions. His direct attack. Easy to see why he had been successful without formal education. Easy to see how he had lifted himself from the quarry to the ownership of Castaway. Easy to understand his pride when he spoke of the ranch and of his business.

"Say 'no' to this man, please," "Answer this man 'yes,' certainly." He studied each letter intently for a few minutes, made quick decisions, passed on to the next. My pencil flew over the pages. "Tell this fellow to go to blazes—in a ladylike way, of course."

But while he worked I was sure he was suffering. Whether it was pain from his accident or worry from some hidden, gnawing care, something was there, deeper than I could know, etching lines of distress on his rugged, strong face.

"Hand me those specifications for the Gallina Dam." I gave him the great sheaf of figures and he spread the mass of papers across his lap, setting deep into their mysteries. A gray shadow rested on his face. I went on typing.

In the hallway the telephone bell sounded and Kobe brought the instrument into the study and plugged it in its connection there, handing the receiver to Mr. Gregg, who reached out his one good hand to take it. His face brightened at the first sound of a voice over the wire—but only for a moment.

"Yes, Estelle. Somebody's on the line. Speak louder."

He lifted warning eyes in my direction and I stopped the noise of my typewriter.

"No, my dear girl. Stay in town as long as you're having a good time. I always tell you that, don't I?"

Now the voice at the other end of the wire, high-pitched and petulant, came so clearly that I could not help hearing the words. "And just as long as that woman stays in the cabin... needn't look for me back..."

Mr. Gregg answered and in his words there was a new note of iron that I hadn't heard before. "Estelle, we needn't go into that again. You're free to do whatever you wish. Stay in town as long as you wish. Come back when you please. But I will not turn anybody away from Castaway who has no place else to go!"

The petulant words went on. Again I heard only part of them. "My friends... coming down to use the cabin... I have some rights... deposit the money to my account..."

"Let's not talk about it, Estelle," Gregg broke in. "You know where I stand. The money will be in your account tomorrow morning. Good-bye."

Faith Clarke's SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

REDUCED COMFORT! A really good pillow for sleeping at the reduced price of $2.99 instead of $3.99 is something to buy quickly. This is another one of those grand Snellenburg Week bargains that you should buy while the buying is good! Each measures 21x27, has extra zipper cover, for cleanliness, and is filled with 5% down, 10% goose feathers, and 85% duck feathers. Something? Bed Coverings Dept., 2nd fl.

SENSIBLE PROVISION. A good housewife keeps a good linen closet, and Snellenburg's store is giving the best of housewives a grand opportunity for bed linen economy during Snellenburg Week. Among other reductions you will find those percale sheets noted for "wearing like iron, but feeling like silk." Fortunately—I say "fortunately"—these on sale are slightly irregular. Which means, my budgeteers, that we may buy them at this shop for $1.69 each instead of $2.39 to $2.98! Count on buying all the sizes you need while you can. Sizes 63x108, 72x108, 72x99, 81x99, 81x108, 90x108 (not too many of the latter). Also 45x36 cases, only 44c. Phone or write—better—drop in. Bed Muslin Dept., 2nd fl.

SLIPCOVERS LESS. How do they do it—with materials going up and labor scarce? But they do! I'm raving about the grand gabardine slipcovers which can be had for $40 a set instead of $46 during the Snellenburg Week celebration. Costumes for a sofa and two chairs, including five-louge cushions! The materials come in florals or stripes. You'll like them. They're washable and pre-shrunk. Oh, their backgrounds are blue, dust rose, wine, green, natural. Cut and fitted in your own home and then finished at the store workroom, with good cord-welted seams, and ruffled or kick-pleated, these slips are tops. Can be bought on deferred payment charge. Upholsteries, 4th floor.

CREDIT COUPONS. Always a friend in shop, the Snellenburg store provides "Credit Coupon Books" to be used like cash by customers. How convenient they are! One book can be used by an entire family. You pay only 10% down, for example, to obtain a $25 book of extended payment coupons, plus a very small carrying charge. In this way you can buy a thing you want when you see it. That means successful shopping. Do investigate in the Credit Dept., 5th fl. There are more good ways than one to buy.

SUMMER MUSIC. An amazing number of people learn to play a piano during the summer months. These include not only children and young people who actually develop a love for getting up early on warm mornings for what soon becomes a delightful hobby. Music is medicine especially in troublous times. Try making your own. It's the thrill of a lifetime when you hear your first tune! For a while, during Snellenburg Week celebration, their celebrated Piano Dept. will let us have one of those dependable, mellow, new spinet "Ludwigs" (made by a tried and true firm) for $295 instead of the regular $352. On a grand budget plan, too, with small carrying charge. Piano Dept., 5th fl. What about it?

A REAL BUY. I never could understand a woman with one umbrella. Three umbrellas would be an economy. Think of the cost of pressing and ruined hats! Be sensible. Provide for summer rains with "extras" such as the Snellenburg Week offerings of beauties at $1.99 instead of the usual $2.85. Good-looking, durable rayon; 16-rib; distinctive handles; border or all-over designs. Backgrounds of black, white, green, blue, wine, brown. I'm buying! You'll never make a better investment (1st fl.).

BLOUSES FOR SUITS. This is a big suit year and, naturally, equally an emphatic blouse season. A Snellenburg special, very special, is now on—new pastels, white, pink, blue, green—like the proverbial hot-cakes. Right in Snellenburg's Stationery Dept., 25c a bottle. Contrasting pastel papers come at $1.25 and $1 a box. Personally, I'm going to use white ink on rust. Try blue on pink, white on green, etc. Cute? 1st fl. This is a fascinating department. Do look around.

Let me urge you to make a very special trip to this very special name sale, during the next few days, at one of Philadelphia's most accommodating shops! Are you on? Faithfully, FAITH.

"JELLIED PRUNES"

1/2 lb prunes
2 cups water
1 lemon
2 tsp. granulated gelatin
1/2 cup grape juice
1 cup sugar

Wash prunes, cover with water, and soak several hours. Add the thinly peeled rind of lemon to prunes and water in which they have been soaked, and simmer gently until prunes are tender. Remove seeds and if you wish put a small piece of pineapple in place of the seeds. Soften gelatin in 1/4 cup cold water. Bring prune juice to a boil, add gelatin, take from fire and stir in the sugar. Stir until completely dissolved. Add the juice of the lemon and the grape juice. Add prunes and chill. Serve with plain or whipped cream. Serves six.

The story of "Wild Bill Hickok Rides" concerns itself with the efforts of one Farrel (Warren William) to get control of the cattle country around Powder River, Montana. Farrel, a Chicagoan, persuades beautiful Belle Andrews to go with him when her gambling house is burned in the great Chicago fire. On the train, she meets and has cause to admire Wild Bill Hickok, who is also going to the Powder River country.

BRISTOL THEATRE

As up-to-date as today's headlines, "Pacific Blackout," gripping thriller film of murder, sabotage and romance during an air raid alert, opens today at the Bristol Theatre. Robert Preston and Martha O'Driscoll have the leading roles.

Set in a large American West Coast city where a practice blackout, with its sirens, roaring bombers and crackling anti-aircraft guns, is in full swing, "Pacific Blackout" is the first picture in the vital theme of Civilian Defense to come out of Hollywood.

Once again that symbol of escape from city pavements and man-made laws, "Tarzan," makes his appearance on the Ritz Theatre screen in "Tarzan's Secret Treasure," with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan again cast as Tarzan and his bride of the jungle.

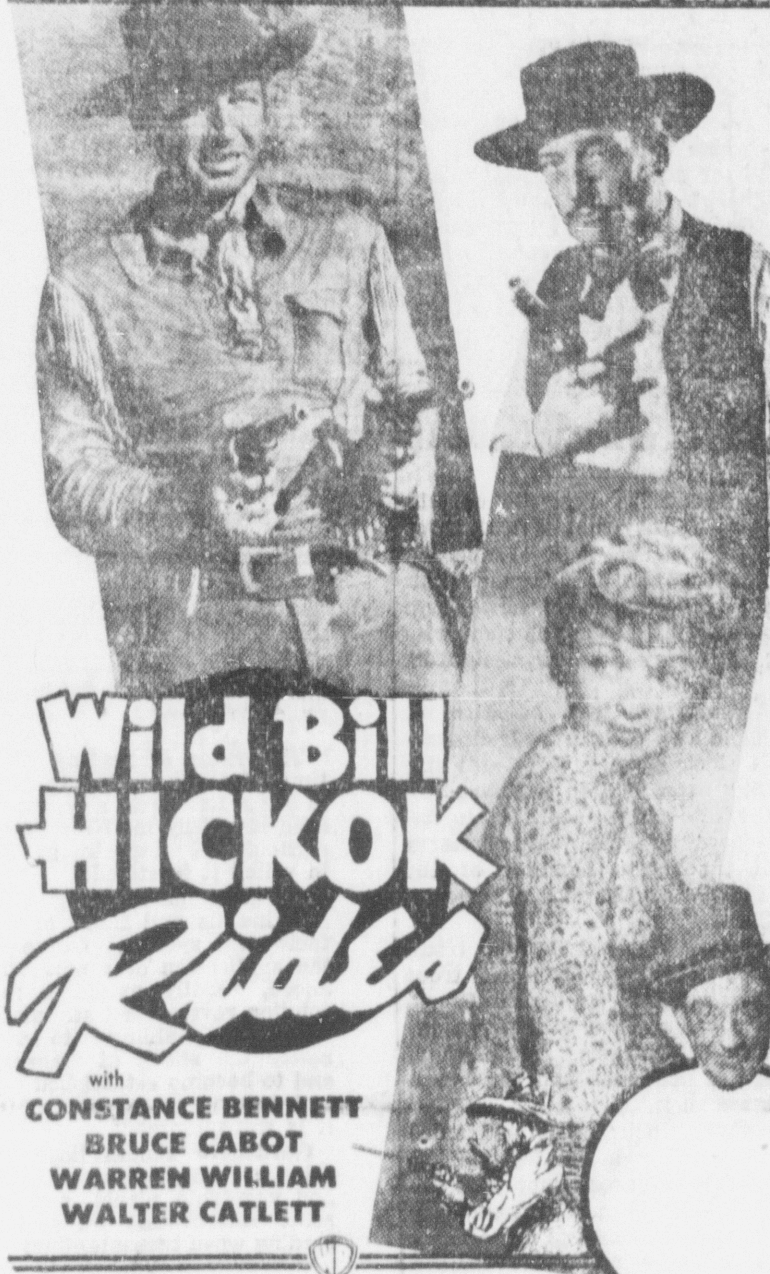

Marking the 25th anniversary of the filming of the first Tarzan production, the new picture presents a fascinating panorama of wild life in the jungle, with the exploits of its King, as much at home in the tree-tops as the monkeys and as facile in the water as the crocodiles.

BRISTOL SUBURBAN BASEBALL LEAGUE NAMES OFFICERS, AND PLANS FOR STARTING THE SEASON

Six teams were represented at the meeting of the Bristol Suburban Baseball League held in the St. Ann's A. A. club-house last night. The other three teams that were members of the league last season will be contacted to ascertain whether or not they intend to join the circuit.

Election of officers was held with the following results: President, Paul C. Voltz; vice-president, Joseph A. Diamanti; secretary, Thomas M. Jano; treasurer, Henry C. Morgan.

There was quite a discussion about the playing fields and it was decided that the Bristol teams would attempt to play all its home games on one field and play ball every evening in the week instead of playing twice a week. George Dougherty, Peter Bornice, Art Kramers, and Henry Morgan were appointed on a committee to secure the playing field.

It was also decided to bar players who play with other teams and leagues. The only exception to this rule is the players of the American Legion Junior League.

As the teams intend to open the season May 1st, another meeting of the circuit will be held Monday night in the St. Ann's club-house at which time franchise fees will be posted.

Present at the meeting last night were: Fleetwings, Art Kramers; Voltz, Texaco, George Dougherty; St. Ann's, Peter Bornice; Badenhausen, Mill Jones; Diamond, Henry Morgan; Odd Fellows, Andy Pfaffenrath.

TROUT SEASON OPENS IN JUST FIVE MORE DAYS

In just five more days the curtain goes up on Pennsylvania's 1942 trout season. At 5 a. m. next Wednesday morning thousands of fishermen will venture forth on streams throughout the Commonwealth to match their wits against the wary and hard-fighting trout.

Local sportsmen will be glad to know that Bucks County trout streams are well stocked, with 8000 legal size fish having been planted late last Fall and early this year, according to figures released by Fish Warden Harry Coles at the recent meeting of the Bucks County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs.

Twenty-five hundred brown trout, 700 rainbows and 2000 brook trout have been released in Cook's Creek, Mill Creek was stocked with 1000 rainbows and 400 brownies. And Ingham Run had 600 brownies and 800 brook trout placed in it.

Montgomery County also had trout stocked in Mill Creek, the Green Lane Park Dam and the creek supplying the Green Lane Park Dam. Approximately 3100 trout were released in these three stretches of water in our neighboring county.

According to Warden Coles the fish stocked in Bucks County were in very excellent condition, being especially thick and solid. All were legal size measuring from six to 12 inches.

Fishermen are urged to remember that all fishing on streams stocked with trout is prohibited from 5 p. m. on the 14th until 5 a. m. on opening day. This ruling will be strictly enforced.

Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia's Director of Purchases and Supplies, and the principal speaker at the luncheon told the Salvation Army workers that "their demands were too modest."

"Your organization must continue. It is too good a thing to stop. Recently when I visited your various institutions and observed your war work, I saw that there was a crying need for improvements and expansion. Your activities well warrant such improvements," Director Grakelow said.

The Great Game of Politics

are not aware of them. They are not the sort of thing considered good for them. The tendency is to regard any emphasis upon these facts as defeatism. The disposition is to steer away from them—to give them the good news instead of the bad. The very individuals who most bitterly complain of popular non-comprehension sponsor the publicity which makes comprehension most difficult and, by gosh, stressing the wrong things, confuse patriotism with a misleading buoyancy.

OF COURSE, it is wrong to think that the stomachs of the people are not strong enough to stand the truth. And, of course, it is wicked to conceal from them the darkness of the picture. Only by facing them now with the grim realities can they be prepared for the bad news

Here's How to Feed Small Plants When Set Out

The value of feeding plants at time of transplanting is discussed in Farm Research, a quarterly bulletin issued by the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station, in which it is stated:

"At transplanting, plants are low in minerals and shorn of most of their root system. Consequently, the application of a correctly balanced, readily available nutrient solution revives and stimulates the plant, thus enabling it to withstand better the shock of transplanting and to become established quickly, and grow vigorously from the time it is transplanted."

Gardeners should bear this in mind in transplanting young flower and vegetable plants, and here is some information on method of feeding when transplanting:

Vegetables: Where large plants such as cabbage and tomatoes are set out, mix a level tablespoonful of a complete balanced plant food thoroughly with the soil in the bottom of the hole before transplanting. Then proceed as usual, being sure that the plants are watered well.

Every four to six weeks thereafter feed at the rate of one heaping teaspoonful of plant food per square foot of soil surface surrounding the plant, working lightly into the soil.

Flowers: For flowers, which are set much more closely in the bed, and are usually transplanted when that every posted man in Washington knows is in store for us. Only by giving them the undiluted truth can they be steered to the fact that this will be a long war; that before it is over every able-bodied man under 40 either will be in defense work or in a uniform; that with every passing month the war will become grimmer; that in another year every citizen in the country will begin to feel the pinch; that before it is won, privation and pain and grief will come to most of us; that it is likely to be bitter and bloody, costly in lives and in treasure far beyond the last war, far beyond anything of which we have dreamed.

IT isn't defeatism to present these facts. It does not incite despair. It is, in fact, exactly the dose the American people ought to be given. Once these facts—and they are facts—are driven home, they will not quail nor falter. On the contrary, there will be a stiffening of the American spirit from coast to coast. There will be an appreciation of realities that will make them impatient with slackers and intolerant of incompetents. Once let the people comprehend fully what they are up against and they will buckle down to the job of crushing our enemies in a way they have not yet begun to do.

THE truth is bad, but it isn't too bad. It is distressing to know that our shipping production is far below our needs. It is terrible to know that there was no way to send help to the embattled American forces at Bataan; that we had to stand helplessly by while they were overwhelmed by greatly superior numbers. It is bad to know that the Japanese still have control of the air as well as superiority at sea in the Far East. It is bad to know that there are influential men in Washington still intent upon pushing a social reform program regardless of the war. It is bad to know that money is being wasted, and that confusion and incompetency are at the peak. All these things are bad to know, but unless they are known, they will never be corrected. Administration publicity is not fashioned to convey this kind of information. There is too much effort to be blithe. It isn't necessary to be pessimistic, but certainly we ought to be realistic. Give the people the truth. Don't hold back unfavorable facts. Don't try to scare them, but give them the truth. They can take it.

of the New Jersey Courts in Trenton. Never the least daunted by the barrage of questions asked him by Assistant District Attorney Willard S. Curtin, the husband-defendant, who served as his own counsel, had the satisfaction of his wife being compelled by law to answer his questions concerning the purchase of a $175 fur coat and evening gown and slippers for $35.

When the husband took the witness stand to testify in his own behalf—literally to tell his story—Assistant District Attorney Curtin facetiously asked: "Is he going to ask himself a question and then answer himself?"

"No," Judge Boyer remarked. "You may begin asking the questions."

Montgomery, who said he graduated with a B. S. in Physical Education from Temple University in 1941, charged his wife with having written letters to a former employer which resulted in throwing him out of a job which paid him $245 a month.

The defendant-husband, who admitted paying his wife and two children the sum of $275 in support orders from January 1st until March 2nd, testified he is unemployed at the present time.

When the evidence revealed that both the wife and defendant-husband are now living in New Jersey, where a support order was originally made, Judge Boyer discharged the defendant and told him that he is now under the jurisdiction of the Trenton courts.

"My husband told me when we went back together for the second time, after the first separation, that he would be satisfied if the three of us—the other woman in the case—could all live together," Mrs. Montgomery testified. "I treated it as a joke and laughed the idea off of 'the other woman' living with us in the same place." Mrs. Montgomery said, "One evening while sitting in the living room he said: 'I think I will call my other wife and see if she got the tickets for "Hellzapoppin'." and another time he bragged he would never work again but leave the other woman keep him and I wouldn't get any support at all,' the teacher-wife testified.

The husband, who testified Mrs. Montgomery came to a dinner and "protested the other woman, a Mrs. Logan, by calling her a bum," branded as utterly ridiculous the idea of the three of them living together.

"Even though Christmas is a sacred day it got so terrible that I couldn't stand it any longer," the husband said. Another strange twist in the hearing came when the husband, who said he was a Girard College boy, testified he was a student there under two names.

Assistant District Attorney Curtin produced a letter in which the registrar of Girard College denied ever having any boy with either name matriculated at the school. "I certainly went to high school there," said the defendant, who added: "Where else would I have gone to school?"

The husband, who is an inspector and a metallurgist by trade, said: "My wife will haunt me and drag me back and forth between these two states asking for more support." He was employed as a steel inspector by the American Bureau of Shipping.
